

VETERANS HOLD SWAY

FEW NEW LEADERS AMONG PROFESSIONAL GOLFERS

Postponement of Tournaments Prevents Passing Judgment on Players.

Jim Barnes at Head of List.

NEW YORK, October 13.—Now that the professional golfers in the North have had their last fling at the open tournament game, a glance back over the records of the leaders reveals the fact that most of those who were prominent in 1916 have again accounted for the major portion of the gold and glory this year. Because of the fact that the number of the important championships were indefinitely postponed on account of the war, there has been less opportunity to size up the "pros."

Of course, the national open championship represents the main event of the year, though last fall the first annual event of the Professional Golfers' Association, at St. Ansoy, was regarded as a close second.

This year there was no national open, no metropolitan open, while the affair under the auspices of the professionals' association was changed as to be combined with a series of so-called "international" team matches, in which combinations representing amateurs, home-bred professionals, Scotch and English, took part. The medal play part of that at the national consisted of thirty-six holes, and it remained for Will Macfarlane, the Scot, from the Hudson River Country Club, to finish in the lead. All he got, however, was a medal, for the proceeds, not only at Englewood, but during the team matches at Baltusrol, Garden City and Swanoy were devoted to relief funds.

So far as actual winnings are concerned, big Jim Barnes, the White Marsh "pro," unquestionably deserves to be placed at the head of the list. He didn't do much in the spring in the South, nor in the patriotic tournament over his home course, but he won third money at Shawnee, won the Western open with a fine score of 283, got second at Kilkare, and only recently won the Philadelphia open title. Last winter, in the South, he won his first money when his automobile ran over him, and this seemed to handicap him off and on throughout the past season. He's playing in his best form now, however, and if nothing goes wrong, he'll be in the South he may be able to add to his winnings before the new year.

Brady Deserves Credit.

Possibly Mike Brady, the Boston home-bred, deserves almost as much notice as Barnes, for let it be said that the Oakley "pro" began the season in fine style by winning the North and South title at Pinehurst. On that occasion he led a strong field. At Shawnee, Brady got second, and finished in the Western in a tie with Frank Adams, of Beverly, for tenth and eleventh money, and the following week won the Kilkare tournament. Further than this Brady has shown in his exhibition matches, some of which have been with Francis Oimert, that he is playing in old-time form.

It is probably unfortunate for Jack Hutchison that there was no national open title at stake this year. When Brae Burn called off the national open and Whitmarsh decided to run a substitute in the form of a patriotic event, the majority of the leading "pros" were on hand. There was no money at stake for the winners, though they all played the best they knew how, and Hutchison led the field by a wide margin. He was also third in the Western open, in a way Walter Hagen, the Rochester home-bred, who won the metropolitan and Western open titles in 1916, has shown a slight falling off this year. Hagen, however, made a great try to regain his Western laurels, finishing only two strokes behind Barnes. At Shawnee, Hagen got fifth money, and he also figured on the winning side of a number of exhibition matches.

By the way, Gil Nicholls started in the spring it looked as if the Great Neck "pro" might eclipse all others throughout the 1917 season, for he won five tournaments in the South. Then, after, however, Nicholls showed less steadiness. He got seventh money at Shawnee and tied for sixth, seventh and eighth places with P. O'Hara and James Donaldson in the South. Then, after, however, Nicholls showed less steadiness. He got seventh money at Shawnee and tied for sixth, seventh and eighth places with P. O'Hara and James Donaldson in the South.

It has been suggested that a caddy championship, open to boys throughout the United States, would be an ideal way to find those youngsters who have the qualifications of first-class caddies. When it is remembered that practically three-quarters of the leading professionals began their golfing careers as bag-toters a little encouragement given to the caddies in the way of playing opportunities would not be amiss. There are many clubs which hold inter-club matches for their boys, but, on the other hand, some organizations frown on such contests.

Tournament for Caddies.

The suggestion is for a tournament to be held on the plan of the Professional Golfers' Association event last year at Swanoy. Each individual club could hold a caddy championship, say, for the boys of that district. The event could be at thirty-six holes, medal play, scratch conditions, so that the best caddy in the club would be certain to win. Following this, the championship could be played on a course to be selected, and only those players who had won their club events would be eligible to compete.

The expense of such a competition would not necessarily be very great, at it would be sufficient to give prizes to the winner and runner-up. The event could be held under the direction of the club professional or the caddy master, and it might be amusing for the members to act as caddies for the boys on such an occasion. Or, if such an affair were considered too difficult to handle, why not have the boys from each club take part in a championship, and the ultimate winners meet in Northern, Southern, Eastern and Western sections, with the four victors coming together in the final?

Nearly all the clubs hold handicaps for the caddies at Christmas or some other holiday, and award prizes for the year's efficiency and good conduct. This is an excellent custom, and one that on the whole is thoroughly enjoyed by the boys, but could not part of the money expended on these entertainments be spent on prizes for a caddy tournament? Surely the competitive spirit is worth while fostering, and who knows but that the caddy of one of these boys will be proudly pointed to as a national title-holder, who was encouraged to keep up his game through the efforts of some of the club members?

rolled another to Gandil, who made a poor throw. Eddie Cicotte covered first and Burns scored. Zimmerman ended the inning by hitting into a double play. Weaver to E. Collins to Gandil, eliminating both Kauff and himself.

The White Sox got their artillery working in the sixth. Gandil went out, Sallee to Hoelke. Weaver singled to left, and Schalk hit to center. Manager Rowland sent Ritsberg to bat in place of Cicotte, and Ritsberg slammed the ball to Fletcher. Weaver, J. Collins and McMullen left their teams

Moon (N. S.) new moon; (1), first quarter; (2), full moon; (3), third quarter; N. S., moon farthest north or south of the equator; (E), moon on the equator; (A. P.) moon in apogee or perigee.

The local time of high water at the places named may be found approximately for each day by adding the tidal difference, printed in hours and minutes opposite the names of the locality, to the times of high tides at Old Point Comfort on the day desired. All sums greater than 12 are in the afternoon (P. M.), and when diminished by 12 give the usual reckoning. For instance, 12:17 is 3:47 P. M. Example: To find the times of high tide at Richmond on October 20, add eight hours and four minutes to 10:45 for the first tide, obtaining 12:19 or 12:19 P. M., and add eight hours and four minutes to 11:04 for the second tide, obtaining 12:08 or 7:08 P. M. Any apparent discrepancies in examples may be explained when it is remembered it happens occasionally that the first high tide at Old Point occurs so late as to throw calculations based on it far into the afternoon or night. In such cases it is necessary to make the calculations on the second high tide at Old Point for the preceding day to obtain the time of the first high tide at the desired locality.

Detailed Score in Fifth Game

BY JACK YEROCK.

CHICAGO, October 13.—Shades of the famous hitless wonders of other days must have turned over in their graves today as the Sox of 1917 staged their terrific batting rallies which won them a victory. Commencing from the first, the home team gamely fought their way out of "dog-man's" like demons with the bats. The detailed description follows:

First inning—Russell faced but three men in the first inning. He walked Burns and Herzog singled. Kauff doubled. Burns and Herzog scored. Second inning—Burns singled. Fletcher walked. Burns scored. Herzog singled. Kauff doubled. Burns and Herzog scored. Third inning—Burns singled. Fletcher walked. Burns scored. Herzog singled. Kauff doubled. Burns and Herzog scored.

Fourth inning—Burns singled. Fletcher walked. Burns scored. Herzog singled. Kauff doubled. Burns and Herzog scored. Fifth inning—Burns singled. Fletcher walked. Burns scored. Herzog singled. Kauff doubled. Burns and Herzog scored.
